

The Death of the Roman Catholic Church

With emphasis on the Shroud of Turin

The 21st century sees the death of the Roman Catholic Church, an organization that will be remembered as having stood between man and God for 2000 years. Usurping and perverting the most pure message of Love, it sustained itself by murder, forgery and theft, while systematically persecuting and killing all genuine Christians. Its misuse of power promoted evil in man. This Christian Church is responsible for the suffering and despair seen in the World and for the ignorance and hate. It created its own God called 'Power and Money'. This is the Church that claimed to represent Him, but treated God as its servant.

By the 21st Century, those with an ability to think are divided into atheists and conscientious, free thinking individuals who sense, or even have found God. The purpose of the Church is to control with demagoguery those who are seen as having no future. The Catholic Church always wanted to become the one world religion. The Bible identified it as the Antichrist.

In 2013 the Vatican clergy elected a Jesuit Pope. Previous Popes that tried to ban the infamous order had promptly been murdered, e.g. Clement XIV.

In 2015, that Pope added a new chapter to the Gospel: "Jesus is a realist. He says it is inevitable that there will be scandals. But woe to the man who causes scandals." This is an admission of the Church being a sewers pit, considered normal by the society – and it is allegedly accepted by Jesus! And the man causing scandals is, presumably, the one who makes them public! The World had entered the Spiritual Age in 2006 and a New Order is affected since 2014. It is indeed, the 'End of the World'!

1997 – 2010, In the shadow of a medieval martyr

Whilst the Vatican planned the next public exhibition of the Shroud of Turin, termed 'the miracle of Jesus Christ' to take place in 1998, Christopher Knight and Robert Lomas published their book "The Second Messiah" in April 1997. In it they named Jacques de Molay, the last Grandmaster of the Knights Templar, as the man whose image appears on the Shroud.

On 2nd April 1997 a shape of a figure resembling the Pope John Paul II is believed to have been formed by the flames of a bonfire in his home country of Poland. The picture which was taken by a young construction worker reached the media in many catholic countries and it became interpreted as a message from God. Nine days later, on 11 April 1997, a fire suspected to have been caused by arson, for the third time in its recorded history threatened the Shroud. If you look carefully at the picture of the Guarini Chapel below left, the same figure towers over the inferno.

Not everyone will be aware that it was the Church who cultivated the notion that the Shroud of Turin would be a fake, whilst trying to rid itself of the artifact as soon as it appeared in public in 1353-1356.

Only veneration and undying public curiosity kept the relic alive, while scientific findings continued proving that the Shroud covered the body of a brutally tortured and crucified man, and it was a man - who survived! If confirmed, that may show the dogma to have been false, and unveil the Catholic Church as a Christian fake.

In 2007 the Vatican announced the release of an 'official document' absolving the Knights Templar. The Vatican's Parchment of Chinon 'not seen for 700 years', now claims that Pope Clement decided in 1308 to save the Templars. The appearance of this document, which is a forgery, happens to be connected to the same researcher Barbara Frale, who was central to the discovery of the discredited burial certificate of Jesus Christ that had allegedly been attached to the Shroud of Turin. The esteemed Professor seems to have any documents the Vatican would wish to fall off the sky cropping up under her feet. The Vatican does not mind. Its history is shrouded in forgeries and con. More on this in Appendix 1.

Church related groups proceeded to show that the man in the Shroud was Jesus Christ, and a reconstruction from the image in the Shroud was made, using contemporary imaging technology. The result proved that the man in the Shroud could not have been Jesus Christ. Pope Francis endorsed the authenticity of the Shroud, but we are not expecting his confirmation of the true victim.

The Church was warned in 2013 that a further abuse of the relic for money will attract retributions and a request was made to pass the artefact to a national museum in Paris, after which the original should stop being displayed. Traditionally, the interval between the displays used to be 10, or more years. In 2013, the Church reduced the gap to 5 years. A display took place in 2015, after the preceding display in 2010. The Vatican has not yet announced whether the holy fathers will serve fish and chips with beer and cider, but presumably, this will already be also under consideration. The town of Turin makes no secret that the move was to generate income during the recession. In 2015 were cut short the efforts of a Spanish priest Hector Guerra, 1953-2015, who was responsible for opening Shroud exhibits around the world and was planning more in the future, when his health failed.

2000, Pope 'apologises for Church sins'

In March 2000 John Paul II, a Polish Pope proving no less retrograde, than other Popes before him, has publicly asked God's forgiveness for the 'sins' of Roman Catholics 'through the ages'.

According to the faith, the most important confession takes place before death. Rumours have long been emerging that the Pope knew that the death of the Roman Catholic Church was nigh. But not even on its possible death bed did the materialistic Church genuinely repent and apologise. Not even to God. The wording:

"We are asking pardon ... for the use of violence committed in the service of truth."

...turns the 'apology' into another act of pomp, for the Church never served the 'truth' and the apology omitted those the Church hurt most. No specific mention was made of the actual papal genocide, or the Cathars. Who was this show made for?

The 'holy fathers' (in sermon and confessions) named the wrongs inflicted on Jews, women and minorities. The most specific apology came in relation to the treatment of Jews, and according to the BBC news online (Sunday, 12 March, 2000, 19:48 GMT), Israel wanted more: "Israel's chief rabbi, Meir Lau, said he expected more and described himself as "deeply frustrated" by John Paul's failure to mention the Holocaust by name."

No one expressed any 'frustration' over the fact, that whole nations had been eliminated and a country, such as Occitania, between France and Spain, the most cultured country in Europe in the Middle Ages, had been wiped off the map to suit Vatican's secular aims. The Pope's apology and the whole performance made it sound as if these events never happened, or they did not matter, at all. The Church entered into the last decade of its life no different, than it was before – only concerned about those with influence and money.

2006, The Cathar Testament

The Bible predicted that "the sky will open as a scroll". In February 2006 the World entered the Spiritual Age. It had been marked with the release of the two sets of Laws, of the Objective and the Subjective God, jointly representing the Divine Order, in the Cathar Testament. It replaces the irrational dogma laid down by the Church during its formation as an institution of power in the 4th Century. With every day that passes, more people in all parts of the World recognise in the Cathar Testament the true teachings of God.

2007, The biggest Catholic Country in the World

In 2007 the Pope visited Brazil, with 147 million Catholics, the largest Catholic country. It is known world over for its samba schools and colourful street dance festivals. (The second largest Catholic population is in the Philippines, with 73 million, and the USA is in third place with 63 million.)

It had not been reported whether the Church commented on the country's passion for dancing, in preparation for the year of the Priest who dedicated himself to condemning the human passion for dance.

According to Avert statistics for 2010, after sub-Saharan Africa with 5% of population developing AIDS, Latin America is in the fifth place with 0.4%. The overall number of people infected with the virus has grown about five fold since 1990. <http://www.avert.org/worldstats.htm> In 2010 the Pope finally condoned the use of condoms 'in special circumstances' and to protect life.

2010, The special year of the Priest - Paedophilia galore!

The Supreme Pontiff Benedict XVI has established that for the occasion of the 150th anniversary of the pious departure to Heaven of St John Mary Vianney, the Curé d'Ars, a special Year for Priests will be celebrated, from 9 June 2009 to 19 June 2010, in which all priests may be increasingly strengthened in fidelity to Christ with devout meditation, spiritual exercises and other appropriate actions. This Saint is seen as a wonderful model here on earth of a true Pastor at the service of Christ's flock.

Vianney spent time in the confessional and gave homilies railing on blasphemy and dancing. If his parishioners did not give up dancing, he refused them absolution.

While still in the year of the Priest, and exactly a decade after the 2000 apology, in March 2010 Pope

Benedict XVI was forced to apologise to victims of child sex abuse by Catholic priests in Ireland. It follows revelations of paedophilia within the Irish Catholic Church, which have rocked the institution. Scandals involving Catholic priests have simultaneously been reported in other countries, including the Pope's native Germany, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Austria and the US. If the Church wanted a year of the Priest, God has not left it disappointed in 2010.

The Church sex scandals would not subside thereafter, and by 2013, a South African cardinal who helped elect Pope Francis has described paedophilia as a psychological illness and not 'a criminal condition'. <http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2294292/Paedophilia-illness-NOT-crime-says-cardinal-just-days-papal-conclave.html#ixzz3h7qNqIOS>

While the Ghanaian Cardinal Peter Turkson, once considered a top candidate to replace Pope Benedict XVI, when asked about the draconian anti-gay laws in Africa, including Uganda's notorious 'Kill the Gays' bill, said that hostility towards gays and lesbians was a tradition that should be respected and understood in the name of cultural fairness. When asked whether the clergy child sex abuse crisis and cover-ups might spread to Africa, the cardinal responded that it is unlikely to have occurred on a similar scale on his side of the Mediterranean, because African societies and cultures are better protected from 'this tendency'. This undoubtedly explains why he had not become the Pope. http://www.bilerico.com/2013/02/top_papal_candidate_blames_child_sex_abuse_scandal.php#SRJkJPMqEH3Iiesg

By 2015, and to mark the 200th anniversary of the birth of St John Bosco, father and a teacher of the youth, the Pope reckoned that Christ considers scandals, presumably also paedophile scandals, to be an inevitable part of life.

The British Foreign Office Faux Pax

Still in 2010... the British Foreign Office has apologised for a 'foolish document' which suggested the Pope's visit to UK could be marked by the launch of 'Benedict' condoms.

Called "The ideal visit would see...", it said the Pope could be invited to open an abortion clinic and bless a gay marriage during September's visit. The Foreign Office stressed the paper, which resulted from a 'brainstorm' on the visit, did not reflect its views. While the event is not significant, it indicates the 21st Century image of the Roman Catholic Church and the respect it commands from those it serves.

2014, Cocaine at home in the Vatican – even in condoms!

Even though gone may be the days when the holy fathers could openly indulge in cocaine with the Pope advertising the substance in the press (Leo XIII, left), the traditional institution has not changed it's habits and fluid cocaine filled condoms worth £33,000 sent to the Vatican were seized by German customs officers in 2014. Cocaine is considered a drug enhancing sexuality. Elmar Mäder, a former commandant of the Swiss Guard from 2002 until 2008, said his time at the heart of the Vatican had given him an insight into certain aspects of life there. "I cannot refute the claim that there is a network of homosexuals", he said.

Also in 2014, the press published claims of a former, unnamed member of the Guard that he had been the target of more than 20 'unambiguous sexual requests' from clergy while serving in the force. Recounting a dinner in a Rome restaurant, the man was quoted as saying: "As the spinach and steak were served, the priest said to me: 'And you are the dessert'." More on this here: <http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2534513/Former-member-Swiss-Guard-says-regularly-asked-sex-gay-lobby-bishops-cardinals-priests-serving-Vatican.html>

The Pretty Boys

With image tarnished by sex scandals often involving by now 'ugly' old men, the Church seems to have decided to put forward it's pretty boys able to project a 'squeaky clean' image, to make itself look more amiable, particularly for the media.

<http://www.cbsnews.com/video/watch/?id=3877043n>

Centre above Jonathan Morris, regularly appearing on US tv.

Georg Ganswein - Vanity Fair

But what do the pretty boys do? Thomas Williams (above third left), a dean of theology in Rome, specializes in exorcism, and in the video on the above link he lists three major signs of a person being possessed by an evil spirit. They are: Speaking another language possibly with a different voice (which is a sign of being able to recall another incarnation, and, or being a channel to a pure Soul); Knowledge of secret things others do not know, or no-one knows (which is a sign of being an advanced Soul, and, if knowing everything a sign of Divinity); Super human strength (which is a sign of God's support via angels). According to this, Roman Church, Jesus Christ would have had to be duly exorcised. 'His' Church would crucify him, albeit with more modern means, all over again.

The Church chose it's pretty boys to speak in public, but it is the person behind the mask, who speaks. While letting themselves to be called 'fathers', they effectively say, that society does not require exceptional individuals with special gifts, and anyone with a connection to God, and if they can prove it, is to be isolated and condemned. No one spoke of exorcising the paedophile clerics. They were first branded 'ill' and subsequently 'inevitable'.

2013, Start of a New Phase

The third Soul destined to become Divine became Divine in 2011. By the end of 2012, more than a half of incarnations on Earth were new Souls. They are replacing the old generation, and they will lead the second phase of humanity, in the Spiritual Age.

While those only feeling their stomachs and only concerned about money screamed in 2013: "2012 had been and gone and nothing had happened!", human suffering is rocketing and the apocalypse happens on the Soul plane. Not least thanks to the Church that, instead of spreading the teaching of God, spread arrogance, and by own example it condoned immorality and crime. The great majority of Earth's inhabitants has failed, and is dying not just in body, but also as Souls. They served to advancing the rest. They either believed that there could be a God evil enough to sacrifice his own Son to save the rogues and, or failing to see instant Justice, they concluded that there is no God. God introduced a New Order into the World, in 2014. 2015 has been the most turbulent year since WWII.

The new generation will gradually live with God. When the rules on Earth come to reflect the rules in the One (the "heaven"), then suffering on Earth will reduce. Throughout the first phase of humanity, which lasted about two and a half thousand years (civilization is much older), the amount of suffering on Earth was on the increase; the trend will reverse in the next phase. Those, who are genuine amongst the priests, pray for God to help them out of the predicament. They must unite and lead the way. The end of the Church presents opportunities.

Appendix 1:

De Molay re-written by Vatican researcher

If we accept that God had an opinion on Clement V, he spoke through the lightning that struck the church in which the pope's body lay in state only weeks after de Molay was dead. It was discovered glowing amidst the ashes – a perfect image of the Satan itself!

700 years have passed since the unlawful murder of Jacques de Molay, the last grandmaster of the Knights Templar. The order was betrayed by the puppet Pope to the French king Phillip le Belle, Clement V, and attempts to present him as a wimp begging for mercy at the treacherous Pope's feet seem to be generated in the Vatican. He was an incarnation of the third Divine Soul, in Christianity the 'Holy Ghost', and his insult is unforgivable.

De Molay in a modern depiction

The lives of Jacques de Molay, and of one of his chiefs, Geoffroy de Charney, were to be 'spared', but on 19 May 1314, when the humiliating sentences were to be made in public, the two worrier monks took the chance of publicly proclaiming their innocence by recanting their forced confessions. They preferred to be fried by the stake before accepting mercy from Clement V, or the king who robbed them.

While history believed that no murder has ever been as visibly avenged as that of Jacques de Molay, with both, the king and the Pope dead not long after the executions, Barbara Frale, a Vatican researcher, continues presenting the world with 'historic documents not seen for centuries', that seem to be not only rewriting the history, but they are changing the characters of the Pope and the grandmaster to suit the organisation who condemned the Knights Templar. Professor Frale seems to be making claims that in fact, Clement V was the Knights Templar's intended saviour.

Ms Frale is a palaeographer specialising in the era around the 14th century. Her discipline includes the methods with which writing and books were produced, and the history of scriptoria. Her employment in the Vatican's secret archives grants her a unique access to all sorts of scripts.

Frale's lucky finds seem to have started as soon as she entered the secret Vatican archives in 2001, with her 'discovery' of the Parchment of Chinon. A man called Étienne Baluze, who lived in the 17th century, may have been the one who the World has to thank for the existence of this 'historic document'; Baluze accepted financial rewards from clergy for publishing other forgeries as 'proofs' for which he came into disgrace and was exiled from Paris to Tours.

Ms Frale claims that she found the document in the 'wrong file'. Presumably, its name was "Forgeries". That may explain why the Vatican quietly sat on the 'discovery' for 6 years before making a public announcement.

The same researcher attempted to see accepted as valid the discredited burial certificate of Jesus Christ allegedly attached to the Shroud of Turin. Frale allegedly deciphered a reverse inscription found on the Shroud in 1978. In November 2009 she claimed that she had discovered the burial certificate of "Jesus of Nazareth" on the Shroud of Turin, and that the date was in accord with the Gospel records. Frale stated that her reconstruction of the text reads:

"In the year 16 of the reign of the Emperor Tiberius Jesus the Nazarene, taken down in the early evening after having been condemned to death by a Roman judge because he was found guilty by a Hebrew authority, is hereby sent for burial with the obligation of being consigned to his family only after one full year."

Others found the writings to be too faint to see.

The esteemed Professor seems to have no hesitation to 'scientifically' validate documents as these – even though her 'findings' are met with contempt by authors who felt discredited after citing her. It seems that she and the Vatican do not care.

In recent years a Jacques de Molay cult seems emerging, especially amongst young people. The weight of guilt on the shoulders of the Church for not preventing his murder may not feel comfortable, and in 2009 Frale wrote of yet another 'discovery the world has not seen for hundreds of years', suggesting that the idol the Templars were alleged to be worshipping in the shape of a head, was in fact, the appearance of Jesus Christ in the Shroud of Turin. More in:

<http://www.shroud.com/pdfs/n73part5.pdf>

An entry in Wikipedia about Frale cites the following: "Consequently, having the chiefs of the Templars begged the Church's forgiveness, the Pope granted them the absolution." Considering recorded historic facts, no-one with any respect for the Truth could conceive the thought that Jacques de Molay would have begged the Church's forgiveness. There was nothing to forgive him. The circumstances of his execution in Paris were witnessed by thousands of people. De Molay's integrity has never been questioned. The Church was founded on lies and it cemented its power by forgeries, throughout its blood soaked existence – from the first day to the last.

Above far left, a portrait of a 'brave Master', the Pope Clement V, and cult images of the 'Servant', Jacques de Molay. The mobile phone cover, 4th from the right, shows his presumed authentic appearance.

Appendix 2

The face of No-one

The late Prof Bonte, while president of the International Organization of Forensic Scientists (IAFS) stated: "...In my opinion, everything speaks for the fact that the blood circulation activity had not yet ended". And the Spanish forensic scientist Dr Lorente, states that "the Shroud carries many signs for life but none for death...". But the Church refuses to accept science and facts - and the Church has money.

The official position remains that the identity of the man in the Shroud is not confirmed. But, and at the same time, groups connected to the Church commissioned a reproduction of the 'real face of Jesus', from the Shroud.

This is what they came up with:

Presuming that the Shroud had been wrapped around the dead body, including the face (which it was not, there was a structure holding it above, to allow the body to breathe), they distorted the appearance by stretching the cheeks to the back of the head. Besides that, the 33 years old Christ got the eyes of a man in his seventies. This is not the face of Jesus Christ.

Some, from the first generation of Souls who remain in incarnation, have seen and possibly have even known Christ. (All first generation Souls will be phased out by 2040, by which time they will have gone through the Final Judgment.) Other Souls on a structured path carry his image in their hearts. These Souls recognise his real appearance.

These were the scars resultant from scourging as reconstructed from the Shroud:

How could these scars on the legs, which are clearly most predominant at the front, and continue almost evenly down to the feet (!), have been the result of the scourging of Christ? It took place in the public and Christ's feet were touching the ground.

They seem likely to have been inflicted on a body hoisted into an elevated position in a torture chamber, possibly with further weights added to the legs, to fix the body for the scourge, and that would also explain the dislocated shoulder not accounted for in the gospel.

With the body lying on a flat surface (or standing upright) human hands are not long enough to reach the groin when relaxed and with elbows bent, as with the man in the Shroud. In this remarkable reconstruction of a body lying straight, the hands are nearly touching the knee.

Does it look as if the body would have two right hands? (The body in the Shroud was laid on a bed of twigs which slightly gave under the weight, bringing the relaxed hands to the groin.)

The reconstruction of the man in the Shroud is as bungled as was the intent behind it. You cannot reconstruct something you want to get out of something that is not what you want. The Church is banking on her flock of sheep not noticing such discrepancies. The dinner and dance parties over a cloth soaked with the blood of a man robbed of his identity continue, despite a serious warning. The Church and those responsible spat on the cloth and God is acting.

The reconstruction of the appearance of the man in the Shroud:

<http://gnli.christianpost.com/video/the-real-face-of-jesus-from-the-shroud-of-turin-9100>

http://www.dhaxem.com/data/handt/The_Shroud_of_Turin.pdf

http://www.dhaxem.com/documents/CATHAR_TESTAMENT.pdf

